- What are the qualities of a just society and a just world?
- How can we organize society to promote values that people find important like freedom, equity, fairness, or human dignity?

To address these questions, this class examines a variety of ideas and real-world cases. We examine theoretical critiques of capitalism and communism. And we investigate a variety of models of economic and political organization, from communist systems as they existed in the past to the present global capitalist system, both as it is experienced in the United States and as it has been moderated in social democratic systems like those in Northern Europe. We also examine whether democracy is an essential element of a just society and what kinds of economic systems are likely to coexist with desirable political systems.

Inequalities based on gender, race, religion, or national identity usually are manifested in part as economic inequalities, and we investigate how economic and political systems have produced or ameliorated those inequalities.

One of the main goals of this class is to encourage you to think hard about what values should stand at the heart of a just society and to imagine creatively how to get there, with due recognition to the obstacles in place in the world as it exists. That means you need to understand what various types of economic and political organization have managed to accomplish and where they have failed. And you need to be attentive to ways social organizations can be modified to benefit the many instead of merely the few.

Office hours: Tuesday and Thursday 2:15-3:15, when you find me in, and by appointment.
Feel free to drop by. My door is usually open.

SLO 7: Evaluate the extent to which social systems influence equity and reflect innate human dignity

Additionally, the Core Component-level Student Learning Outcomes are listed below:
Component-level Student Learning Outcomes Students who complete this course will be able to:
1. Analyze the cultural-institutional conditions and causes of just and unjust social systems using such concepts as social location, relationships, power, privilege, and vulnerability
2. Apply such ethical concepts as human dignity, equity, well-being justice, and the common good to critically evaluate both existing social systems and proposals for social change
3. Envision and articulate systemic social changes and other ways to promote flourishing, well-being, equity, justice, and the dignity of the human person

Global Interdependence

Global Interdependence is one of 19 Core Components. The University Core SLO(s) that this component is designed to intentionally advance are listed below:
University Core Student Learning Outcomes The Core SLO(s) that this component is intentionally designed to advance are:
SLO 6: Recognize transnational or global interdependence

Additionally, the Core Component-level Student Learning Outcomes are listed below:
Component-level Student Learning Outcomes Students who complete this course will be able to:
1. Ask complex questions about other cultures or international processes
2. Interpret intellectual and emotional dimensions of more than one worldview
3. Describe how the lives, values, and experiences of people are affected by factors or processes outside of their own countries or localities
4. Envision alternative strategies to address challenges rooted in interactions with people and societies outside the United States
5. Reflect on how personal choices and local actions affect and are affected by events or processes beyond national borders

This class also fulfills the College of Arts and Sciences Global Citizenship requirement. The Global Citizenship requirement is designed to educate students about global and transnational problems and to

1. Identify sources of and strategies to address conflict, cooperation or competition in a global or regional context.
2. Investigate how people and nations confront inequality and claim a just place, whether in their own societies or in the world.

Civility. Sometimes we will discuss controversial issues in class, and you may disagree with things you hear in class. You are always welcome to disagree either with me or with other students, but you must do so in a respectful and informed manner, appropriate to an institution of higher learning.

Plagiarism. It is critical that all work that you hand in is your own work and correctly gives credit to other sources that you consult. Plagiarized work will receive a grade of 0. Copying sections from someone , as does having someone else or something else, like ChatGPT write your essay for you.

Technology. While the most self-disciplined among us will not be distracted by the wealth of entertainments provided by the internet, laptops tend to reduce uninterrupted focus on what is happening in class. Laptops can even be a physical barrier between you and the person behind the raised screen. Most of the time, I will ask you to keep your laptops and phones closed and stored away.

- B Quality Work work of high quality. Class participation is voluntary, frequent, and reflects effort
