was called Certificate in Anatomical and Physiological Science (CAPS) for two years. At that time the term "certificate" had to be dropped. It became MAPP in 2011. They are proposing for students that finish the program in good academic standing, they receive a certificate on their transcript. They average about 9 students per year. Some years it is as high as 16. Following that MAPP year they have experienced an 84-85% success rate of students either getting into a graduate program or into medical school.
